INTRODUCTION

TikTok, the popular mobile application first introduced in September 2016, has revolutionized the way people engage with video content. With a strong user base consisting mainly of Millennials and Gen Z, TikTok has become a significant platform for entertainment and video sharing. Users can create and share videos, fostering a vibrant community centered around user-generated content (Ni Luh Warini et al. 2020). Its growing popularity among millennials can be attributed to its ability to fulfill their social interaction needs and provide a platform for self-expression (Abraham Mikhael 2019). This aligns with the current trend of utilizing social media platforms as avenues for personal expression and connecting with peers. TikTok's popularity as a social media platform has skyrocketed, surpassing downloads of other popular applications like Instagram, YouTube, WhatsApp, and Facebook Messenger (Wijaya and Mashud 2020). This extraordinary success highlights the platform's appeal, which has managed to attract global attention in a relatively short time. Consequently, businesses have recognized the potential of TikTok as a powerful content marketing platform.

Content marketing has become an essential strategy for companies to promote their products and increase sales. TikTok offers a variety of digital marketing features, such as content marketing strategies and paid advertising, which allow companies to reach a wider audience and boost product sales. Brands must understand the importance of creating creative and attractive content that captures the attention of users and generates interest in their products on this platform (Teresa Guarda et al. 2021). To optimize the use of TikTok as part of their marketing strategy, businesses can rely on unique and creative content and take advantage of the features available on the platform. For example, creating videos relevant to trending topics or participating in hashtag challenges can increase visibility and engagement. Marketers can also use analytics tools to track engagement and measure campaign effectiveness (Dave Evans and Jake McKee 2010).

The influence of TikTok on consumer purchase intentions has been extensively studied, and the findings indicate that TikTok can be an effective platform for digital advertising and marketing campaigns (Meliawati, Gerald, and Akhmad Edhy Aruman 2023). However, successful marketing on TikTok requires precision and creativity in content creation to shape customer value and engagement (Yana Respati Dewi 2021). Businesses must develop engaging, high-quality content that resonates with their target audience to drive customer interest and ultimately increase sales. By leveraging the unique features of the TikTok platform, businesses can engage with a younger audience and reach new customers (Melissa Barker et al. 2012). TikTok's algorithm and user interface offer opportunities for marketers to create engaging content that resonates with their target audience. Strategies such as hashtag challenges, branding effects, and in-feed video ads can be utilized to build brand awareness, generate leads, and drive sales (Chaffey and Ellis-Chadwick 2015). Measuring campaign effectiveness on TikTok can be challenging but crucial. Marketers should use relevant metrics such as views, likes, and new followers as indicators of success (Melissa Barker et al. 2012). Additionally, product quality and aligning content with the platform's

TikTok has great potential for digital marketing, as described in the journal "Digital Marketing Strategy: An Integrated Approach to Online Marketing" (Simon Kingsnorth 2016). Through various advertising options such as in-feed ads, hashtag campaigns and video promotions, businesses can effectively showcase their products or services to active and engaged users on TikTok. Especially popular among the younger generation, TikTok is becoming a valuable platform for businesses to reach their target audience. In a study involving 50 respondents, it was discovered that TikTok advertising videos are creative and easy to understand, helping users find relevant advertisements. This is in line with previous research by (Yang, Zhao, and Ma 2019) which emphasized the uniqueness of TikTok ads that contribute to the rapid spread of videos. In addition, this research shows that many respondents (46 out of 50) use TikTok for entertainment, which further underscores its potential as a strategic platform for product promotion. Trust in TikTok ads is also evident, with respondents agreeing (50 out of 50) that they can find ads that suit their needs and wants, while 45 respondents trust ads on the platform. Furthermore, 46 respondents strongly believe that they can rely on product information and user comments on TikTok. Although many previous studies were conducted in China, TikTok's home country, these findings show that entertainment applications such as TikTok can be a strategic place to promote products (Yu Han 2020).

Using TikTok has several drawbacks that need to be considered. First, the majority of TikTok users are teenagers with an age range of 16 to 24 years, so this platform is not appropriate for reaching an adult audience that is the target market for certain businesses. Second, TikTok still doesn't provide features that make it easy to convert from brand awareness to sales, because there's no direct way to link product links to sales sites. The TikTok algorithm also requires adjustments to suit different business marketing needs. Finally, there are concerns that TikTok's popularity is only a temporary trend and may not have the long-term staying power of some other apps (Ayyub Hamdanu Budi Nurmana.M.S S.Sn. 2023). In addition, the use of TikTok also has problems in terms of performance analytics which are difficult to track because the analysis system is only available for 28 days, so it is important to make regular records over a longer period of time (Rizky Ayu 2022). In addition, the existence of clickbait methods and intrusive advertisements in the free version of TikTok can also affect the user experience and reduce trust. In addition, TikTok's privacy policy and terms of use are not always clear to users, and users are often exposed to third-party advertisements and promotional content that is irrelevant to the app. All of these drawbacks need to be considered carefully before deciding to use TikTok as a medium for business promotion (Anggi 2023).

In the table In the content marketing strategy on TikTok, a brand can follow several steps to increase awareness and achieve increased sales. First, brands can create creative content that is interesting and relevant to the brand's target audience. Creative and unique content will make the brand get the attention of more TikTok users by leveraging the use of hashtags according to the target audience and popular back sound to increase content exposure. Apart from that, brands can also use the ad features provided by TikTok. Through advertisements that are set according to the brand's target audience, brands can reach a more specific audience and increase the chances of achieving the desired sales goals. By combining creative content and advertising strategies, brands can get maximum results in their content marketing efforts on the TikTok platform. In this research, we will answer the question of whether content marketing techniques can help brands that are new to using the TikTok platform to increase sales. The proposed approach is to create marketing content that uses ads and without ads, by utilizing hashtags and back sound that are popular among the segmentation targeted by the brand. We will test whether this content marketing technique is effective in increasing sales of the ready-to-wear fashion brand "shayn", which has just started using the TikTok platform. In this effort, we will create interesting and relevant content, hoping to attract the interest and engagement of TikTok users, and drive sales growth for "shayn".

METHOD

This study uses a quantitative research approach to descriptive analysis according to (Sugiyono 2017) statistics are used to analyze data by describing or describing the data that has been collected as it is without intending to make general conclusions or generalizations. This is to get an in-depth understanding of the role of content marketing on TikTok in increasing sales. The research approach used in this research is a case study. We chose the "shayn" brand that has recently used TikTok as a content marketing platform, and its impact on sales. This research was conducted for a month, from 5 May 2023 to 8 June 2023 for creative content. while for advertising use from 15 June 2023 to 21 June 2023. This research was conducted online by monitoring content marketing activities on TikTok. The instrument uses observation to observe and record content posted on TikTok and user interactions that lead to sales. Data collection uses direct observation of posted content and user interaction on TikTok as seen from sales. The data obtained will be organized, analyzed and interpreted to gain an in-depth understanding of the role of content marketing on TikTok in increasing sales

RESULTS

This study aims to investigate how content marketing can affect sales through the TikTok platform, with a focus on the local brand "shayn". The data collected in this study uses two different content marketing techniques. First, content marketing is carried out using creative content in the form of inspiration styling videos, using yellow baskets without using advertisements and how about using advertising marketing. The data collected through this strategy will be analyzed qualitatively to answer research questions regarding the role of content marketing on TikTok in increasing sales. Data analysis will involve grouping, classification, and data simplification techniques to provide answers that are relevant to the research topic.

This brand has just used the TikTok platform as a strategy in its content marketing. see the results of using content marketing without having to pay a fee starting on 05-07-2023. above are the results to prove the important role of creative content in content marketing, whether it can generate sales on a new account. The results found show that the use of creative content that uses yellow baskets can generate sales, even in minimal amounts. This is understandable because the brand is still in the stage of building awareness of its existence. It can also be seen that the number of product views obtained is very significant when the content is created according to market segmentation and can be related to the wishes of the buyer, thus giving the expected impression when using products from the "shayn" brand.

Source: TikTok Apps (Promote Tools)

It can be concluded that the use of the "Promote" feature on the TikTok application (not the TikTok Dashboard) only provides potential value or potential buyers who have put the product in the basket. Ads spread to thousands of users and provide awareness where users view advertised products through uploaded creative content. However, of the 435 users who clicked on the product link, only 1.6% actually put the product in their cart, which is 7 users.

The test results show that content marketing using creative content without advertising is more effective than using paid advertising because creative content is proven to be able to increase sales without having to spend a budget. This discovery has important implications for brands in developing marketing strategies on TikTok by leveraging content marketing without using advertising to increase sales. However, this research has limited time and funds for advertising. In this study, the findings show the importance of creating content that is relevant to market segments and meets market segment expectations when using products offered in short duration content. We also found that brands need active engagement in every post so that TikTok users in this segment are aware of the brand's existence.

DISCUSSION

This study aims to investigate the impact of content marketing through the TikTok platform on increasing sales of the local brand "shayn". Two content marketing techniques were used in this study: content marketing with creative content and advertising marketing. The collected data were analyzed qualitatively to answer the research questions. The results show that using creative content without ads on TikTok is effective in increasing sales, even if it's in minimal amounts. Content that is relevant and in accordance with market segmentation affects the level of brand awareness. This marketing strategy has important implications for increasing sales and requires active involvement of brands in every post on TikTok. This demonstrates from journal "Creativity of Social Media Marketing as a Digital Marketing Communication Strategy in Indonesia" by (Xaviera Wardhani 2022) creative content can attract consumers and prospective customers, ultimately enhancing brand awareness and sales. Every brand must possess creativity in planning the concept of their content, implementing brand community-building programs, and delivering messages through content that engages the rational, emotional, and moral aspects. Each brand's creativity has its own uniqueness that can create a sustainable impression on consumers, thus the value of creativity can help improve a brand's competitiveness in executing communication strategies

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, this research explored the impact of content marketing strategies on TikTok in increasing sales for the local brand "shayn". The study found that leveraging creative content without using advertising on TikTok can effectively increase brand awareness and generate sales, even with limited resources. It emphasized the importance of creating relevant and interesting content tailored to specific market segments. Active brand engagement on TikTok was also identified as crucial in increasing brand visibility and attracting potential customers. The findings highlight the potential of TikTok as a platform for content marketing and sales growth, offering opportunities for businesses to reach a younger audience and drive customer interest. However, it is important to consider the limitations of TikTok, such as its predominantly teenage user base and challenges in tracking performance analytics. Overall, this research provides valuable insights for brands looking to utilize TikTok as a strategic platform for content marketing and sales expansion
