

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

In this chapter, I will discuss the summary of the previous chapters and my chosen solutions. The problem that I discuss is my difficulty in handling an 8-year-old boy who likes to lie. The first cause is the child wanted to avoid the punishment, the second cause is the child was afraid of disappointing his parents. The effects of the problem are the child lost credibility and respect, while the second effect is his dishonesty often leads to a negative consequence. Then I find the solution to overcome my problem. The solutions are I will encourage him to be truthful, I will improve my knowledge to handle the children, especially about to those who like to tell lies to others, and I will provide a fair consequence.

In overcoming the problem, I choose all the solutions that I have discussed. The reasons I choose all the solutions is because every solution has important roles to make the child stop lying to others. First, I will improve my knowledge to know the reason why the child telling lies to others. I will try to find out books or articles which discuss about this problem. Then I will provide give consequences. Fair consequence will discipline and remind him not to tell lie. Then, as a teacher I will encourage him to be truthful. I will try to have more time to talk with this boy and encourage him to be honest all the time.

By combining all the solutions, it will be possible to handle the child who likes to lie to others and make him stop telling lies. I hope through this paper, the readers and equalBright School teachers can have more insights on how to handle the child who likes to lie to others.
