

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

After doing the analysis of the problem, I find that there are three causes of my difficulties in handling the students in the 4th grade at Paulus Elementary school who had low motivation in learning English. The first cause is commonly, students in the 4th grade were losing interest in learning. The second is the students found the task too difficult. The third cause is my teaching techniques were not interesting. In addition, there are also three effects of the problem. The first effect is the students' grades were low. The second effect is the students did not do their school work. The third effect is I failed in getting the unmotivated students to learn English. Moreover, there are also three potential solutions to the problem. The first is I will use group work in learning process. The second is I will use realia in teaching English. Third is I will present the students new material in small steps and give the students practice after each step.

After analyzing the three potential solutions and their positive and negative effects, I decide to combine all of them as the best solutions to overcome my problem. As all the solutions deal with teaching techniques, they can be applied in every lesson. First, on preparing the lesson plan, I will make sure that the lesson is divided into small steps. Anywhere possible, I will bring realia and have group works to make my students more motivated in learning English. Hopefully, by applying this solution, the students can understand the lessons better, and remember more vocabulary and the learning material. Therefore, their grades can be better than before resulting in the increase of their motivation in learning English, and also their enjoyment in every learning process.

As a result, the difficulty in handling unmotivated students in the 4th grade at Paulus Elementary school who had low motivation in learning English has made me understand about teaching techniques which can build students' motivation. By applying all the potential solutions, I expect that those who have the same problem as mine can have references to increase students' motivation.
