ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, I express my gratitude to the Lord Almighty for always showering me with His Grace that enables me to finish my study and this final thesis. Secondly, I thank all the lecturers and staffs of the English Department for always giving their best to support me. Thanks to Ibu Dr. Trisnowati Tanto, M. Hum. for her generous assistance during my study in Maranatha. I would also like to give my special thanks to Ibu Dra. M. Melly Kosasih, M.Si., who has inspired and challenged me to study deeply about the topic of my thesis.

I also realize that this writing would not have even been complete if not for the support, love and concern of my sisters of the Religious of the Sacred Heart, to which I belong. So, I would like to specially thank Sr. Gerardette Philips Ph.D., my superior who always lifted me up when I felt down, and Sr Nance O, Neil who was always ready to listen and encourage me, and each RSCJ for their understanding and prayer. Last but not least, I thank all my families, my classmates, especially Maria Henez, Krista Hermawan, Vidya Vimuti, and Nabila Ferdiansyah for always encouraging me and supporting me to be my best self.
