

RIWAYAT HIDUP PENULIS

Nama : Yunita Pratiwi
Alamat : Komplek Rancabali I
JL. Batu Granit Blok D – 1
Bandung, 40514
Tempat, tanggal lahir : Bandung, 23 Juni 1981
Nama Ayah : Sidarto Pratjihno
Nama Ibu : Lily Rukiah

RIWAYAT PENDIDIKAN

1985 – 1987 : TK YWKA , Bandung
1987 – 1993 : SD YWKA II , Bandung
1993 – 1996 : SMP Negri IX, Bandung
1996 – 1999 : SMU BPI I, Bandung
1999 – 2001 : LPM PAP - ITB
Jurusan Komputerisasi Design Graphic,
Bandung
2001 – 2007 : Universitas Kristen Maranatha
Fakultas Sastra Jurusan Sastra Jepang,
Bandung

LAMPIRAN I
SAILOR FUKU

LAMPIRAN II

GAMBAR ILUSTRASI TENTANG GADIS YANG
TERLIBAT DENGAN ENJO-KOSAI

LAMPIRAN III

GAMBAR BUNGKUS TISU YANG BERISI IKLAN TEREKURA

LAMPIRAN IV

ARTIKEL-ARTIKEL TENTANG ENJO-KOSAI

Tokyo passes law against prostitution by teenagers

According to a 1996 survey by the Tokyo city government, about one-quarter of girls between 12 and 15 admitted taking part in a telephone-club chat at least once.

The law comes into force on Dec. 16, making Tokyo one of Japan's last districts to introduce laws against teenage prostitution. Under the new laws, people who have sexual relations with those under 18 in exchange for money or valuables can be given up to a year in prison and fined up to about US$4,000.

The law was introduced amid a wave of what is called "enjo kosai" (compensated dating) sweeping Tokyo and other parts of Japan. In August, the Tokyo government set up laws to counter one of the main outlets for enjo kosai - telephone clubs. Male clients of telephone clubs pay money to enter a booth in the club and wait for private calls from girls who dial from outside the club.

Many of the participants fix a date to meet and agree on the details of a particular sex act and the price. Copyright © 1997 The Seattle Times Company, Friday, Oct. 10, 1997

Used underwear for sale

January 5th, 2004 by Lee

I saw an interesting discussion program on TV the other night. The panel was made up of a rather disparate group of individuals. Or as the program imaginatively billed them, a generation jungle.

The main topic of conversation was of the supposedly common practice among schoolgirls of enjo kosai. Or compensated dating to use its English (and rather polite sounding) translation.

Whilst I'm in no way a proponent of such behavior, according to the program, some of the cases are merely innocent dates. Well, innocent for the young girls in question. As they turn up, have dinner, chat a little, and then get compensated handsomely. I guess their companions motives are somewhat less innocent, and heaven knows what goes through their minds, but at least they don't do anything untoward. Unfortunately not all dates act so chivalrously, and in many cases the young girls unfortunately do have to earn their money. But sadly it has to be said that they enter into such agreements voluntarily, many of them wanting the cash simply to buy new designer/brand goods.

Not surprisingly both the discussion panel and audience wholeheartedly condemned this unsavory activity. The selling of used underwear on the other hand, proved a more, ahem, sticky problem. One of the panel in particular was a vociferous supporter of the practice, claiming she gets at least 5,000 Yen (26 Pound) for each pair. That's pretty easy money it has to be said. I have to admit, that in the unlikely event that somebody was willing to pay that kind of money for my (for want of a better description) soiled underwear, I'd be more than willing to help out.

Indeed, when it was put to the vote, a quarter of the audience decided that underwear selling, was, by and large, ok. Although which members of the audience voted this way wasn't disclosed. Having said that, I dare say that it wouldn't be difficult to work out.

So without further ado, let the bidding commence. How much for these?

So as not to mislead potential buyers, I must say that I am NOT a Japanese schoolgirl. Rather, a 34-year-old British male.

A Plain School Uniform as the Latest Aphrodisiac

By Nicholas D. Kristof

TOKYO, April 1 -- With a shy, quivering glance that she had practiced a thousand times, eyes slightly downcast but luminous with innocence and apprehension, Kaori sat at her desk in her prim school uniform, framed by a blackboard, waiting for a 'teacher' to walk into the classroom and rip her clothes off.

It looks like a real classroom, and baby-faced Kaori looks just like a real Japanese schoolgirl. But it is all make-believe, for here in Japan the best way for a prostitute to recruit clients is to put on a school uniform and adopt the naive anxiety of a frightened schoolgirl.

'Japanese men tend to be obsessed by schoolgirls,' said Kaori, who would not give her last name but cheerfully conceded she is really 26. 'The men who come here are looking for submissive schoolgirls.'

This is an 'image club,' one of several hundred in Tokyo where Japanese men pay about $150 an hour to live out their fantasies about schoolgirls. In this club, customers can choose from 11 rooms, including classrooms, a school gym changing room, and a couple of imitation railroad cars where to the recorded roar of a commuter train, men can molest straphangers in school uniforms.

Behind the image clubs is a disturbing national obsession with schoolgirls as sexual objects. Far more than in most other countries, men in Japan seem to find schoolgirls sexually alluring -- and, by all accounts, the target age is getting steadily younger.

The sexuality of schoolgirls has become an issue in Japan over the last year or so because a growing number are turning to prostitution to raise pocket money. But most of the disapproval has been directed at the girls rather than at their middle-aged customers, and in any case it is legal in Tokyo for men to have sex with children over the age of 12.

Many Japanese, particularly women, say they are deeply troubled by this obsession with schoolgirls. Yet by international standards there is remarkably little domestic outrage in Japan at what people here call Loli-con, or the Lolita Complex, after Nabokov's novel about a middle-aged man's obsession with a young girl.

What is the appeal of very young girls?

'Lots of Japanese men feel very threatened by adult women,' said Masao Miyamoto, a male psychiatrist and the author of a best-selling analysis of Japanese society. 'But a 15-year-old girl would not be threatening. It's not so much sexual as psychological.'

Dr. Miyamoto and others say the discomfort that many men have with women their own age is in part a consequence of the growing sophistication of Japanese women. While most men slave over their jobs and take almost no vacation, a growing number of young women find they have the time to travel abroad, to read books, to go to concerts or to take evening classes.

A result is that while several decades ago most middle-aged men still felt more worldly than the women they encountered, now the opposite is often true. So to seek comfort and relaxation, the analysts say, the men turn to the only females over whom they can still plausibly feel some edge -- schoolgirls.

'In associating with young girls, men want to behave in an overbearing way,' said Rika Kayama, a female psychiatrist and social commentator. 'They want to position themselves as superior to the girls.'

Several decades ago, sexual fantasies centered on 'office ladies' in their 20's. Then the focus became college women, and a few years ago it shifted to high-school girls.

Now the focus is on junior-high-school girls.

'The age at which the girls seem interesting is clearly dropping,' said Hiroyuki Fukuda, a 30-year-old man who edits a magazine called Anatomical Illustrations of Junior High School Girls. 'But it's only the maniacs who go for girls below the third grade.'

Two years ago Mr. Fukuda founded a new magazine, V-Club, that is full of pictures of naked elementary-school girls.

'There is no law, so far as we know of, to punish such conduct directly,' a police spokesman said. Laws against obscenity and regulations for the protection of children can be used against child pornography, but this is rare.

To be sure, Japan is without doubt a safer place for children than America. Groping of teen-age girls on crowded subways is very common in Japan -- 69 percent of high-school girls said in a recent poll that they had been abused in that way -- but most other crimes are much rarer in Japan than in other industrialized countries. While there is doubt about the reporting, only about one-thirtieth as many rapes are reported per capita in Japan as in America.

Most of the attention in the Japanese press lately has focused on schoolgirl prostitution. A survey last year in Tokyo found that more than 25 percent of junior-high girls had called 'telephone clubs' -- pornographic services that pay girls to have erotic conversations with men.

Nearly 4 percent of all junior-high girls said they had accepted money in exchange for 'dates' with men.

'I think it's O.K. as long as they pay me,' said Yuki Shinohara, 16, who said she dated men for money but had not slept with them.

Girls like Miss Shinohara are acutely aware that because of their youth they are a sought-after 'brand' in a brand-conscious society. Miss Shinohara said she is already over the hill -- 15 is the best age for a woman in Japan, she believes -- and that her sparkle will be all gone by the time she graduates from high school and gives up her uniform.

Told that she would still be young after graduating from high school, Miss Shinohara shook her head sadly.

'Oh, no,' she said. 'After graduation, we'll be old ladies.'