

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

In this chapter I would like to present the chosen solutions to solve the problem. Before that, I would like to present the summary of the previous chapters. The problem I found during my internship is the students did not obey the school rules in the classroom. There are three causes of the problem, the first is the teachers were not strict, the second is there were external distractions, and the last is the students felt bored with the subject. There are three effects of the problem, including, the study time was wasted, disobedient students gained less knowledge from the teacher, and the disobedient students bothered other students who were willing to learn.

To solve this problem, I presented three potential solutions. The first potential solution is the teachers should be strict to about the school rules. The second potential solution is the teachers give a reward to the students who obey the school rules. The third potential solution is the teachers teach the students routines to obey the rules.

Based on the analysis of the potential solutions, as first solution can make the students not to close with the teacher, because the teacher is strict, I think the best solutions to the problem is the second and the third. The second solution brings advantages of making the students happy when their effort of obeying the rules is appreciated with the reward, and they will be more enthusiastic in learning the subjects. The third solution can also give benefits, including causing the students to obey the rules as a habit and making the students be independent in doing assignments or tasks. Therefore, the teaching and learning time will run smoothly and the class will be more organized. By combining the solutions, it is hoped that the students can obey the school rules in the classroom and will not find the class boring anymore.

In conclusion, I think the problem of handling the students who do not obey the school rules is really important. Thus, I would like to suggest those who want to do an internship like I did, to improve their teaching skills and their knowledge about how to teach and discipline the second-grade students first and to apply the solutions presented in this term paper.
