

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

In the previous chapters, I have analyzed the problem that occurred when I was doing my internship. The problem is the teacher assistant in Calf class is not ready to teach English for children of 3-4 years old. The causes of this problem are the teacher assistant was graduated from Mandarin department and she did not make any preparation before the class. The effects of the problems are first, the students lose concentration, the second they will not understand the lesson. I provide three potential solutions to solve the problem. There are, the teacher assistant should prepare the lesson before the class, she should attend an English course, and the school should find a new English teacher.

After analyzing the problem and the potential solutions, I would like to present the most suitable solutions to solve the problem. I have combined two potential solutions, which are the teacher assistant should prepare the lesson before the class and she should attend an English course.

First, the teacher assistant should prepare the lesson before the class.

By having a preparation before the class, she will be more ready to teach and can teach more smoothly. In the beginning, it will take a lot of time for her to prepare the lesson, but after a while she will need less time to do it because she will have better experience in doing this. Second, by attending an English course the teacher assistant will be able to speak English better and she will teach more confidently.

I choose to combine these two potential solutions because by preparing the lesson before the class, it will make the teacher assistant more ready in teaching English. Furthermore, by attending an English course it will improve her English language quality; therefore she will be able to speak English better and can teach more confidently. By having these two potential solutions, I believe it will improve the quality of her English language.
