

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Finally, according to the discussion in the previous chapter, I find four benefits of CIL method in stimulating children to communicate in English.

First, CIL method builds an interactive learning process that stimulates the children to communicate in English. By this method the teachers interact with the children in order to supervise them to do the activities. In addition, when the Wallaby says an English expression and the children reply the expressions, there would be interaction as well.

Second, in the learning process, CIL method gives the children an opportunity to have an experience with English communicatively, which helps the children to build their confidence to communicate in English. It means the children have an experience that they can communicate using English.

Third, CIL method also encourages the children to be more independent to communicate in English. The children can reply the English expressions taught without the help of the teacher after the very first meeting.

At last, by presenting Wallaby, CIL method builds a fun way of learning English while the children are improving their English.
